In order to determine a consumer's risk level, VeriScore utilizes an underlying statistical probability model. This model makes use of a multitude of Risk Factors, considered at various points in time for various industries, where applicable. Examples of risk factors include account types and balances, age of accounts, number of accounts, instalments, arrears, negative information, etc. Due to the magnitude of information involved in the calculation it is not possible to identify a single factor that determines the risk level, but rather it is a combination of all the factors i.e. the entire behaviour of the consumer over time. A risk score is only available after at least 6 months of payment behaviour.

Please take note that even though VeriCred Credit Bureau (Pty) Ltd takes all reasonable measures to ensure that the VeriScore on this credit report was calculated and displayed correctly, we do not accept any liability for any error or omission, any dispute arising therefrom or any action you take in reliance thereon and provide no warranty as to the accuracy or integrity thereof. The VeriScore was independently developed by VeriCred Credit Bureau (Pty) Ltd and may therefore differ from the ratings provided or used by other credit bureaux, credit providers or other suppliers. The use of the VeriScore to apply for or grant credit or other services will be at your own risk. The result of your VeriScore does not guarantee that you will be able to obtain credit or other services as credit providers or other suppliers may take other factors into consideration for decision making and as such other factors may determine a consumer's behaviour and repayment.
